What are the most emblematic culinary specialities?

Steeped in Amazigh culture, one of the best ways to discover this region is through its gastronomy. The ingredients used in Daharan cuisine are farm-grown, and travelers are treated to fresh, locally-grown ingredients.

Here are 7 dishes not to be missed if you travel to Dahar!

Traditional breakfast di Dahar

Most Dahar guesthouses offer breakfast, and you won't want to start your day with anything less than the traditional di Dahar breakfast. The typical breakfast includes freshly baked bread called tabouna, olive oil, honey, shriha (dried figs) and bsisa (barley flour mixed with spices and olive oil).

Krabiz

This Amazigh dish uses fresh wheat dough cooked in a thick, spicy sauce, flavored with kadid (salted, air-dried meat) and legumes such as chickpeas, lentils or broad beans. The village of Tamezret is particularly famous for its krabiz.

Gharbhouz

Gharbouz, also known as shriha, are dried figs and are an important foodstuff in the Dahar region. In fact, there's an entire festival devoted to figs, the Gharbouz Beni Khdech Festival, which takes place in November. Figs are extremely important to Amazigh culture and grow with the help of jessours, sophisticated water structures used to collect rainfall in the dry climate. Dried figs are a great souvenir of the Dahar!

Gazelle horns

Sometimes called “gazelle pegs” or “Mahshi Tataouine”, these traditional North African cookies are shaped like a crescent. They are characterized by a flaky, buttery pastry and an almond flavor. Travellers can find these delicious cookies in Tataouine.

Ftayer

Ftayer is also known as the Tunisian doughnut. This is a circle-shaped fried bread usually eaten in the morning. A specialty widely practiced by the inhabitants of the Ghomrassen region in Tunisia and internationally (Ftayer Festival organized every year in ghomrassen).

Brik

Brik is a thin, salty dough that is fried and wrapped around a filling. Typical fillings are tuna, meat, egg or cheese. In Tunisia, brik is generally shaped like a triangle, and is best served with a squeezed lemon. Brik is a staple food during Ramadan.

Chorba

This is a traditional Tunisian soup, usually prepared during Ramadan. The soup is richly spiced and contains hearty ingredients to keep you energized on your travels.

Many of our guesthouse owners will be happy to offer you a unique culinary experience and share with you recipes handed down from generation to generation. For those wishing to take Dahar recipes home with them, cooking classes can also be organized.
